SCIENTISTS ABLE TO START STILLED HEART

University of Chicago Professors Declare They Can Do It With a Solution of Common Salt.

Perform Experiments With Organs of Turtles and Apply Their Conclusions to the Human Body.

Chicago. Dec. 25.—The Record tomornow will say:
Experiments on turties have convinced Dr. Jacques Loeb and Professor D. J. Lingle, physiologists at the University of Chicago, that common salt in the blood makes the heart beat. What is more, they claim that not only does make keep the heart in action, but that it possibly may cause the heart to beat again after it has once stopped.

For several months Dr. Loeb and Professor Lingle claim, that the fallacy of the early belief that the heart beats because it is full of blood was quickly shown when a strip of the turtle's heart was suspended in a solution of salt and a regular series of beats began. Separated from all nerve connections, the lifetess strip of heart muscle responded perfectly to the prove their theory. They have conducted a series of delicate scientific tests bearing upon the pulsation of the heart, and today made public the announcement that the results they obtained had verified beyond doubt their theory that the presence of salt in the blood caused the beats of the heart.

In the experimental work by the two physiologists, turtles were used almost exclusively. After snipping off the heart that were not possessed by calcium or potassium, the salts of which enter into the composition of the brooken in the fact that the action of sodium chloride, or common salt, was due to the peculiar character of the sodium. But, then, in connection with this dissemination of news, the press, in Mr. Harmsworth's judgment, has lost reputation. He says:

"Lately there has begun a kind of internecine warfare between its various organs of the press, by which they very largely injure their own positions and that of their opponents. An item of news published in one paper is immediately discredited in another, and the public, raturally enough, comes to the opinion that newspapers are usua perfectly correct statement as 'mere newspaper talk.'"
